

NEWS BRIEFS

Wolf call
A Wolf call for all base personnel is scheduled for 5 p.m. today at the foot-ball field next to the base exchange. Topics for the Wolf call are the upcoming unit compliance inspection, the Combined Federal Campaign and wing safety issues. Immediately following the Wolf call, food and refreshments are served by the Loring Club.

Dining facility closed
The main dining facility and C-pad dining facility are closed today. Those on meal cards will be reimbursed for meals these days. Both facilities re-open for midnight meal Saturday.

Climate survey
The Air Force Climate Survey runs through Nov. 23. The survey is listed at: <https://afclimatesurvey.af.mil/>. People can complete it during the period from their personal or government computer.

College registration
College registration for Term II runs through Oct. 21. Classes start Oct. 24. For information, call 782-5148.

NEO exercise
The next courageous channel Non-combatant Evacuation Operation exercise is Oct. 28. All nonmission-essential active duty family members, DOD civilians, invited contractors, technical representatives and their families are required to participate. The evacuation control center and processing line will be at the Loring Club. The exercise starts at 8 a.m. and the club remains open until everyone is processed. For more information, call the family support center at 782-5644 or 782-5627.

Public affairs tour
A public affairs cultural tour is scheduled for Oct. 26 at the Jeonju Traditional Culture Center. Wolf Pack members have the chance to learn to play Korean instruments, make a traditional Korean meal and watch a classical art performance. To sign up, contact Mrs. Rosemary Song at 782-5194 or via e-mail at songae.song@kunsan.af.mil.

Proper prior planning prevents pitifully poor performance

By Staff Sgt. Thomas Brick
332nd Expeditionary Contracting Squadron

BALAD AIR BASE, Iraq (AFPN) — As a young Boy Scout sitting in a junior leadership training class, I was taught something that sticks with me to do this day.

The subject was the Seven Ps: Proper prior planning prevents pitifully poor performance. This phrase ties in very well with our day-to-day mission here.

Being deployed to the desert puts us in the spotlight; we are the lead element of our Air Force. The Seven Ps should be utilized while deployed more than ever, because if we fail to properly plan here then the poor performance to follow could be the loss of life or multimillion dollar aircraft. But the Seven Ps aren't just useful for the big things; they are useful in everyday operations and can make your job much easier.

When any project comes to you, you should immediately set a plan in motion to not only get it accomplished, but to get it accomplished the right way.

We never should just slap something together and call it good.

Field-expedient fixes are fine, but as soon as we get that fix in place we need to start planning to do it right and not just put it off. This goes back to our core value of "Excellence in all we do;" it is something that sets us apart.

This also applies to procedures and plans that were in place before we arrived. If you see something you know is not working well and causes problems, don't just shrug it off and say, "That is how we do it here," do something to change it.

As a Boy Scout, I was taught to leave a place better than I found it.

That can mean simply cleaning up after yourself and what others may have left behind, or it could mean improving the place by making things work better.

You can create a plan that makes your shop more efficient or solves a problem others have left behind.

Do you really want to deal with a field-expedient fix for some extended period of time? Do you want to just meet the minimum requirement of the mission without really accomplishing much?

Take advantage of your time to make your shop and your base better for you and those who will follow you by using the Seven Ps.

Recent changes improve Korea assignment program

Recent policy changes to the Korea Assignment Incentive Pay program allow Airmen at places like Kunsan to apply for the program before or after their arrival in South Korea.

The program authorizes $300 monthly payments to Airmen who sign a written agreement to serve the prescribed tour length in South Korea plus an additional 12 months.

Previously, Airmen were required to accept or decline the program before their permanent change of station departure from their current base.

Now, Airmen who decline the program before their PCS move may still accept a KAIP tour after their arrival in South Korea.

If applying after arrival, they may do so before entering their Date Eligible for Return from Overseas forecast window that starts on the first day of the 10th month before their DEROS from South Korea.

Airmen who accept the program before their PCS to South Korea are ineligible to apply for a follow-on or home-basing assignment.

Likewise, Airmen who arrive in South Korea with either a follow-on or home-basing assignment will lose that assignment if they elect to participate in the KAIP program.

If eligible, they may still request one of the following extension programs: the Overseas Tour Extension Incentive Program; an In-place Consecutive Overseas Tour; a subsequent DEROS extension; or another KAIP tour for the same tour length.

For more information, Airmen can visit the Air Force Personnel Center's assignment procedures Web site at www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/procedures. Program information is linked under Hot and/or New Topics.

Climate survey offers chance, shape future

By Master Sgt. Brian Orban
8th Fighter Wing public affairs

Airmen at Kunsan joined others across the Air Force this week to provide feedback to help shape the future of the service during the 2005 Air Force Climate Survey.

The computer-based survey "taps the pulse" of the Air Force by asking for opinions from its active-duty members, civilians, Reservists and Guardsmen.

"This survey will help us ensure we are taking care of our most important asset — our people," said Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. T. Michael Moseley during a recent message. "The questions in the survey itself are intentionally hard-hitting, and I fully expect your direct, honest and candid feedback."

The survey, offered every two years since 1997, measures how people feel about leadership, supervision, training, recognition and other aspects of the Air Force.

This year's survey also gauges effective communication, teamwork, judgment and adaptation under pressure.

"It's important to give our leaders feedback, what we think about the Air Force and what we think is important.

It's part of our responsibility to our leadership," said Col. Brian "Wolf" Bishop, 8th Fighter Wing commander.

Information gathered from service members during these surveys gives Air Force leaders feedback from those who make the mission happen. Leaders at all levels can use this information to improve an organization's climate and to ultimately improve its effectiveness and productivity, according to Capt. Edmond Sims, chief of the 8th Mission Support Squadron's manpower and organization office.

The survey's importance hinges on maximum participation, and the more people who participate, the better the results, said Captain Sims, whose office oversees the survey here.

Manpower officials here stressed the survey protects people's identities, and the computer-based poll uses advanced information-masking reporting software to keep responses anonymous.

In past surveys, respondents provided feedback leading to ways to improve productivity and to focus attention on areas identified as needing improvement. In 2002 for example: Aeronautical Systems Center officials at Wright Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, took feedback received from the 2002 survey to add a new telephone system with voice-mail capability at the center's financial services office.

The idea eliminated hardcopy travel vouchers, which stopped costly "assembly line" work when mailing out travel vouchers. Section workers also developed an automated self-help tool for travelers that gave technicians more time to work complex inquiries.

It's feedback like this Air Force leaders want to hear, according to Captain Sims.

"Last year, Kunsan placed second in the entire Air Force for participation in the climate survey. That shows a lot for the Wolf Pack and what we do and how we respond to the needs of the Air Force. I'm hoping this year we can be number one," said Col. Bishop.

Survey analysts expect to finish compiling and analyzing survey data by the end of January 2006. Officials will release the final report to the Air Force chief of staff and secretary of the Air Force in February 2006 with reports sent to the field immediately afterward.

The Air Force Climate Survey takes an average of 30 minutes to complete, and people can submit their feedback from their government or personal computer. The survey is located at <https://afclimatesurvey.af.mil/>.

Cultural Corner

Did you know?

Hanok' is a word used to describe houses constructed using the traditional Korean style of architecture. Korean architecture lends consideration to the positioning of the house in relation to its surroundings, with thought given to the land and seasons. The interior structure of the house is also planned accordingly. This principle is also called 'baesanimu', meaning the ideal house is built with a mountain in the back and a river in the front, with the 'ondol' heated rock system for heating floors during cold winters and a wide 'daecheong' front porch for keeping the house cool during hot summers. Houses differ according to region. In the cold northern parts of Korea, houses are built in a closed square form to retain heat better. In the central regions, houses are 'L' shaped. Houses in the southernmost regions of Korea are built in an open 'I' form.

ACE donates money to relief effort

By Staff Sgt. Erien Clark-Chasse
8th Fighter Wing public affairs

The Airmen Committed to Excellence committee at Kunsan raised more than $2,900 in relief money for the victims of Hurricane Katrina during the past several weeks.

The money raised will be donated to the American Red Cross during the Wolf's Call today.

The committee includes members from units across base, and as their name implies committed to excellence.

"We wanted to help because it was the right thing to do, so we decided to raise money," said Senior Airman Joshua Garcia, 8th Communications Squadron and ACE president.

"Raising money was best in our opinion because we felt it would be easier and best because this way the money buys exactly what is needed."

The committee started soliciting donation almost immediately after the disaster and continued up until the beginning of this month.

"We put a boot in each of the unit lounges and we had members take donations as well," said Airman Garcia.

The ACE committee has plans to continue with these types of community projects.

"We are starting with plans to 'adopt' our own orphanage which we would make monthly visits," Airman Garcia said. "We want more people to come out and support ACE." Those interested in joining ACE should contact Airman Garcia at 782-4106.

The next ACE committee meeting is Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. in the Loring Club.

FLUSHED OUT OF THE POCKET

Looking for an open receiver, quarterback Kevin Dooms from the 8th Communications Squadron is flushed out of the backfield by, from left, Christopher “Rob” Robinson and Jorge Reyes from the 8th Security Forces Squadron Defenders during Wednesday evening’s American League match up. Halfback William Gazzaway connected with receiver Sam Dixon on a 20-yard pass and Dixon carried the ball into the end zone on a 20-yard run to put Comm on the board early in the second half. Comm improved its regular season record to 4-3 after it apprehended the Defenders during its 7-0 victory.

One run settles ‘battle of titans’

Last inning rally lifts Red Devils over Ammo for softball title

By Master Sgt. Brian Orban
8th Fighter Wing public affairs

In the end, it came down to one run.

With the score knotted at the bottom of the final inning, Matt “Rhino” Reinhardt crushed the ball over the right field fence to give the 8th Civil Engineer Squadron Red Devils the go-ahead run to take the base’s intramural championship in a 14-13 thriller Oct. 5.

Delayed a total of three weeks due to rain and base-wide training exercises, this year’s post-season tournament tested whether or not the flexibility of the Devils’ players in the field could beat out the seasoned veterans of the 8th Maintenance Squadron’s Ammo squad.

During the 2004 softball playoffs, it was the Red Devils that had the disadvantage in the postseason, having to play through the loser’s bracket for a shot at the championship against the reigning Ammo team. This year, it was Ammo that came into the final game as the underdogs, losing their second playoff game against the 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron Cobras, forcing them into a “do or die” situation.

“All of us have had our ups and downs with hitting,” said Ammo Coach James Whitacre. “But out hits are contagious. Once we string two or more together, the rest follow.”

“We all come out to win every game,” said Devils’ Assistant Coach James Tadlock. “What we lack on offense we make up on defense. When someone has a bad game, someone is always there to step up.”

One thing both coaches agreed on: It was going to be a close game.

Carl Hix put the Devils on the board at the bottom of the first with a two-run homer. Anthony Neal finished off Ammo’s five-run rally at the top of the second with a three-run shot to give Ammo a 5-2 advantage.

Following a single by Reinhardt, Devils’ Mike Trevino added a two-RBI single to tie the score at five. With runners on second and third, the Devils capitalized on an Ammo error late in the inning to give them a one-run lead. Ammo’s outfield made another key error at the bottom of the third, putting the Devils in the position to score off a single by Ryan Valerde, raising the score to 7-5.

Neal and Vinnie Cardiel each scored an RBI to tie the score at the top of the fourth. With the two runners at first and second, Chris Bast blasted a shot over the left field fence to give Ammo a 10-7 lead and energized the growing crowd of Ammo fans. An error by the Devils’ outfield allowed Eduardo Mata to score an RBI and load the bases.

Looking to avoid the grand slam, Devils’ Pitcher Bob Pinder threw wildly to give the next two batters the full count, giving Ammo two more runs. The idea was to pitch around Ammo’s big guns to avoid a greater scoring deficit, Pinder said after the game.

At the bottom of the fifth, Hix added another RBI off a double while Juarez brought in two more runners but still left the Devils trailing 10-12. At the top of the sixth, Donavon Schafer picked up an RBI off his double to extend Ammo’s lead to 13.

At the bottom of the inning, Tadlock returned the favor with an RBI single to narrow the score to 11-13 in favor of Ammo. The Devils loaded the bases, looking to take the lead. However, their hopes were dashed after Bast made the leaping catch to end the inning.

Still trailing by two going into the final inning, the Devils made short work of Ammo off a double play. Valerde continued his winning ways with a two-run homer to knot the score at 13, setting up Reinhardt to make the winning run.

“I was trying to find from green [base hit],” Reinhardt said as he discussed his championship winning hit. “The pitcher threw me some ‘meat,’ and I caught it.”

According to Tadlock, this year’s championship came down to the best of the best. “We wouldn’t have wanted it any different; this is what the fans came out to see,” he said following the game. “We never give up.”
